

CDQ IS SEEKING APPLICATIONS FOR Editorial Board Members and Ad Hoc Reviewers

We are looking for professionals interested in and researching career counseling and career development!

- Required: PhD or terminal degree (ad hoc may be PhD students in dissertation)
- Required: Training in research methods and analysis
- Preferred: Published peer-reviewed research on career counseling and development
- Preferred: Prior experience serving as an editorial board reviewer
- Note: Early-stage researchers with limited publication or editorial experience may be selected as an ad-hoc reviewer

CDQ has been advancing knowledge about career theory and intervention since 1911. The CDQ Editorial Board, recognized for its outstanding quality, makes this possible. Leading scholars in the field provide the critical judgments needed to make informed editorial decisions.

As a board member, your responsibilities include reviewing approximately 1 manuscript a month and attending our regular board meetings.
